Crosswalk citation: Hungarian Central Statistics Office

Special Instructions: Translation from Hungarian Required. The LIS labels have special characters, which makes translation difficult. Scheme looks very similar to ISCO-88, but Hungary-specific. <http://unstats.un.org/unsd/cr/ctryreg/ctrydetail.asp?id=1400> provides some details of deviation from ISCO.

Note: The Hungarian Statistics Office has a crosswalk from FEOR-93 (which is very similar to ISCO-88) to ISCO-88. Some of the headings do not exist in the crosswalk and were matched on the basis of face validity (see “Notes”).

Special Instructions: Translation from Hungarian Required. The LIS labels have special characters, which makes translation difficult. Scheme looks very similar to ISCO-88, but Hungary-specific. <http://unstats.un.org/unsd/cr/ctryreg/ctrydetail.asp?id=1400> provides some details of deviation from ISCO.

Note: We utilized a crosswalk from the Hungarian Statistics Office to take this from FEOR-08 to FEOR-93 to ISCO-88. There was one typographical error in the crosswalk for 7310, metal moulders. Some of the headings do not exist in the crosswalk and were matched on the basis of face validity (see “Notes”).

Note: We utilized a crosswalk from Ganzeboom and Treiman (2013) to match ISCO-68 to ISCO-88. Foreman (7000) and Supervisor (7001) could not be brought over to ISCO-88 because of the structural differences, so they were coded as missing. There are some “unknown” portions in the categorization because of some occupations being coded as headings that do not exist in ISCO-88. First-level headings (used in Colombia’s surveys) are designated in the “Notes” column.

Note: We utilized a crosswalk for NCO-1968 to NCO-2004. NCO-2004 is based upon ISCO-88; therefore, after verification that the two schemes match, we translated occupations from NCO-2004 to ISCO-88. For the most part, we had a list of occupations to crosswalk; however, in several instances there were NEC categories with no occupations listed. See “Coding Procedure” for details on how we handled these categories.

Mexican Classification of Occupations (CMO)

Crosswalk Citation: Instituto Nacional de Estadística y Geografía (INEGI) (2012)

Special Instructions: Translation from Spanish Required. The LIS labels have special characters, which makes translation difficult.

Notes: We utilized a multi-way crosswalk from INEGI that uses four steps. First, we translated the CMO codes into Sistema Nacional de Clasificación de Ocupaciones (SINCO), 2011. Then, we translated the SINCO codes into ISCO-08. Finally, we crosswalked the ISCO-08 codes into ISCO-88. Any categories that did not sync up were recoded on the basis of face validity of the occupational list. These steps ensure greater comparability than a direct code of CMO into ISCO-88 because the crosswalks are directly from the Mexican statistical office. A CMO-to-ISCO-88 crosswalk could not be located.

Mexico SINCO

Relevant Country-Years: Mexico 2010, 2012

Link to Scheme (SINCO-11): <http://www3.inegi.org.mx/sistemas/clasificaciones/sinco/sinco.aspx> (note, use Google translate)

Crosswalk Citation: Instituto Nacional de Estadística y Geografía (INEGI) (2012)

Special Instructions: Translation from Spanish Required. The LIS labels have special characters, which makes translation difficult.

Notes: We utilized a crosswalk from INEGI to match SINCO-11 to ISCO-08 and then matched the ISCO-08 occupational codes to ISCO-88. Note, although this is SINCO-2011, the survey from 2010 matches the categories perfectly. In cases where categories do not exist in the crosswalk and could not be recoded based upon face validity, we coded them to missing (See “Notes” column).

Special Instructions: Translation from Spanish Required. The LIS labels have special characters, which makes translation difficult.

Note: The CNO scheme is heavily based upon ISCO-88. The structure is slightly different; Panama has a few headings that do not exist in ISCO-88. We mapped over most of the headings directly based matches between the Panama and ISCO-88 scheme. We noted and crosswalked over headings individually that do not exist in ISCO-88.

Note: We utilized a crosswalk from CNO-2010 to CNO-2000 from the Panama Statistics Office. Then, we mapped the CNO-2000 categories over to ISCO-88 (since it is based upon ISCO-88). There are two unknown categories: 7999001, artisans, and 3123003, foremen. Codes not in the codebook were coded on the basis of face validity. Note, the LIS codes are in scientific notation in the codebook. You can remedy this problem by dividing by 1,000,000 and reporting the tabulations to get the actual codes.

Note: The scheme is based upon ISCO-88, according to LIS. The categories are similar but the numbers are not correct for ISCO-88. The Peruvian statistical office (INEI) has a scheme that syncs up with some of the heading titles, but not all. We pieced together this recode list using the INEI occupations list and the fact that it is based upon ISCO-88.

Crosswalk citation: U.S. Census, Analyst Resource Center (<http://www.workforceinfodb.org/2aboutus.cfm>)

Note: We used the U.S. Census' crosswalk to map the 2002 Census codes to SOC. Then, we used the ARC's SOC to ISCO-88 crosswalk. The crosswalk had several third level headings that had to aggregate lower level headings to ensure correct percentages. We also based some of the crosswalk on the face validity when the SOC code could not be determined (See "Notes" column).

Crosswalk citation: U.S. Census, Analyst Resource Center (<http://www.workforceinfodb.org/2aboutus.cfm>)

Note: We used the U.S. Census' crosswalk to map the 2010 Census to the Census 2002 codes. Then, we mapped those codes to SOC and used the ARC's SOC to ISCO-88 crosswalk. The crosswalk had several third level headings that had to aggregate lower level headings to ensure correct percentages. We also based some of the crosswalk on the title where the SOC code could not be determined. Some of the 2010 Census codes were new and had to be mapped individually, using the job titles (See "Notes" column).

ISCO-88 Country-Specific Recodes

For several country-years, the occupational code variable (occ1_c) almost completely matches ISCO-88. LIS maps these codes to their ISCO equivalents; however, they retain a few country-specific codes that do not map over well. We recoded these occupations either completely into ISCO-88 or to missing. We also recoded armed forces codes and level one ISCO-88 headings to missing. A list of these countries, and their relevant recodes, are provided in the table below.
